The sustainability consulting firm Three Squares Inc. (TSI) is excited to add the cutting-edge electric vehicle manufacturer Quantya to its client roster of emerging green tech companies and environmental leaders. Three Squares Inc. will develop innovative marketing and outreach strategies for Quantya's U.S. expansion. In addition to marketing Quantya's impressive line of electric motorcycles, TSI will focus on developing partnerships to bring Quantya's advances in battery management systems and electric vehicle engineering to other manufacturers.

"Quantya brings Swiss engineering and style to the electric vehicle marketplace at a time when the world is focused on finding solutions to battle climate change. We're thrilled to work with Quantya on capturing a slice of the $14.6 billion U.S. motorcycle market," says Three Squares President Jaime Nack.

Quantya combines Swiss ingenuity and attention to quality to deliver electric transportation based on lithium polymer battery technology and a proprietary Battery Management System (BMS). Quantya's current production line features 3 types of electric motorcycles designed for recreation and street usage. Quantya's research and development lab in Switzerland is also testing proprietary technologies on other types of vehicles (electric cars, trucks and ATVs) in order to market Quantya's components to electric automobile manufacturers who rely on lithium polymer batteries, like Tesla Motors.

"We selected Three Squares Inc. because we see the tremendous potential of utilizing their network to propel Quantya to the next level here in the U.S.," commented Dario Trentini, Chief Executive Officer of Quantya USA. "There is a bright future ahead for electric vehicles and we are making every move to secure our place in the worldwide market."

Quantya has received numerous national and international awards for its engineering and design prowess and continues to receive support from the Swiss Office of Energy.
